INTRODUCTION

PURPOSE: The purpose of this guide is: (1) to alert users to the research potential available in microform in Milner Library; and, (2) to serve as an aid to locate and utilize these materials.

(1) The rapid development of microphotography during the past twenty-five years has enabled Milner Library to acquire extensive collections both historical and current. For instance, Milner Library owns in microform a copy of virtually every book and newspaper published in the United States until 1820; every English book published between 1475 and 1700; the papers of the twenty-three presidents of the United States held by the Library of Congress; many of the parliamentary papers of Great Britain, Canada, and France; and much of the major educational research completed since the mid-1960's. As primary resource materials, some of these collections by their nature are seldom used. However, another reason that microforms are not used more frequently is that they are less obvious than books. While it is true that most of the items within this guide are in the main card catalog, the Periodicals Directory, and the Newspaper Directory, the scope of these collections seems to get lost among the many other entries. Therefore, this guide has been compiled to promote microform collections beyond the limitations of these tools.

(2) The need for an aid to assist potential users of microform materials is apparent when one realizes that in Milner Library microforms appear in four different formats, are not uniformly analyzed in the main card catalog, are classified in three systems, are shelved on all six floors of the Library, and are accessible through a variety of printed indexes, publishers' brochures, and guides within the film. This situation is not especially unique to this library but does reflect the confluence of several past trends: the rapid development of technology; an increased willingness of libraries to share their bibliographic wealth; aggressive advertising and salesmanship by micropublishing companies; and scholars and libraries eager to enhance their institutions' holdings. However, many companies have filmed materials as they existed without compiling adequate finding guides or without issuing indexes in printed form, a practice that greatly hinders the use of microform. And, because they were inundated with large quantities of materials in microform, libraries cataloged their new acquisitions with differing degrees of completeness. This guide attempts to reconcile the difficulties of using microform materials in Milner Library by bringing together their locations and aids to their usage.

SCOPE: Included in this guide in microform are (1) collections based on previously published bibliographies; (2) the holdings of libraries; (3) collections of books, periodicals, newspapers, manuscripts, and pamphlets gathered from various sources and treated by Milner Library as a unit; and, (4) collections of documents of state, federal, and international organizations. This guide does not include individually cataloged monographs or series of publications by professional organizations (e.g., Proceedings of annual meetings, etc.) which are easily located in the main card catalog and which require no additional indexes to facilitate their usage. Nor does this guide include individual periodicals or newspapers that are not included as a part of a larger collection. These may be located in the Periodicals Directory or the Newspaper Directory which are available at the Information Desk on all floors.

FORMAT: Every effort has been made to provide a consistent arrangement between entries. The collections are arranged alphabetically, most by the same Library of Congress form of entry under which they are entered in the main card catalog. A typical entry will include:

A. The author and/or title of the collection.
B. The floor location, format, and classification number.
C. A brief description of the materials.
D. A listing of the indexes or guides that provide access to materials.

EXAMPLE:

A B

Jeffersonian America. (Floor 4 Microfiche 973.08 ES)

C Includes over 700 titles relating to the Jeffersonian era found in the University of Virginia Library. The titles are listed in A Dictionary of Books Relating to America, by Joseph Sabin.

D INDEX:

LOCATION OF MICROFORM: Each floor has an area designated for shelving microforms. Ask at Information Desks.

LOCATION OF READERS: Each floor has an area designated for readers of all microform. Ask at Information Desks.

RELATED PUBLICATIONS:

Several of the following provide additional information about many of the collections in this guide, while others list microforms that are available, but not currently owned by Milner Library.

1. Microform Review. v.1 - 1972 - Westport, Conn. (Floor 1 Z 265 .M565)

   This periodical critiques many of the microform collections included in this guide. It also publishes articles dealing with the use of microforms in libraries, announcements of developments, new projects, indexes, etc.

2. Sheehy, Eugene Paul. Guide to Reference Books. 9th ed. Chicago: American Library Association, 1976. (Ref. Z 1035.1 .S43 1976)

   This new edition of Constance Winchell's Guide to Reference Books provides information about many standard bibliographies on which microform collections have been based.

3. Dodson, Suzanne Cates, ed. Microform Research Collections; a Guide. Westport, Conn.: Microform Review, Inc. 1978.
(Floor 1 Z 1033 .M5D64 1978)

4. Chicago. Center for Research Libraries. Handbook. Chicago: 1978.
(Floor 1 Ref. Z733 .C52345)

The Center is a consortium which allows member libraries to borrow needed publications which they do not own and which because of infrequent usage or insufficient funds they will not purchase. Many of the Center's purchases are microform collections and are described in the Handbook. Milner Library is a full member.

This guide is indebted to a previous guide to microforms in Milner Library which was compiled by Peter Olevnik in 1972. Since that time the microform collection has nearly doubled, some older sets which were then in progress are now completed, printed guides to several older collections have been published, and all locations have been changed with the move to new Milner in 1976. This guide was a joint effort of the following librarians who constituted an informal committee. Special recognition should be given to Shirley Lindsey, Joey Meihsner, and Karen Thompson for many hours of typing and proof-reading.

"ASI aims to be a master guide and index to all the statistical publications of the U. S. Government .... It includes all Federal publications which contain primary data of research value or secondary data collected together on a special subject, and also special studies and analyses or other statistics-related materials. All types of publications are covered, whether published as periodicals, as special one-time reports, as items within a larger continuing report series, or as annual or biennial reports."--Introd., ASI 2d Annual supplement, 1975. ASI identifies and catalogs these statistical publications; it describes and indexes the data, and micropublishes the material indexed. Since Milner Library is assumed to hold all "depository" items, only the "non-depository" items are purchased in microfiche.

(Con't next page)

INDEX:

1. American Statistics Index, 1973-
(Index Tables Ref. Z 7554.U5A46)

Issued monthly, with quarterly and annual cumulations. The ASI 1974 Annual and Retrospective Edition provides coverage of materials in print Dec. 31, 1973, as well as significant publications produced since the early 1960's. Each ASI edition has two parts -- an index and an abstract section. ASI provides access to data by:

a. Subject and name, referring to specific subject areas, places, personal or corporate authors;
b. Categories of information, referring to geographic area, economic and demographic categories;
c. Titles of publications;
d. Agency report numbers.

Locate the entry needed in the index volume. Use the alpha-number ASI abstract number at the close of that entry to refer to the Abstract Volume and locate a summary of the data, including pages on which the information is listed. If the abstract's bibliographic citation includes an entry for "Item no." the item is a depository item and must be located in the Government Publications paper collection. If no "Item no." entry is given the data is "non-depository" and may be located in microfiche by using the ASI alpha-numeric number and the year to retrieve the copy.
